In Trying Times, 20 Wines Under $20 That Revive and Restore

By Eric Asimov Oct. 15, 2020

If you are tired of drinking the same old thing, these bottles, from nine different countries, represent the wide range of great values now available.

Feudo Montoni Sicilia Nero d'Avola Lagnusa 2017

I often find nero d'Avola a tough grape to love. While I have had some great varietal examples, like Arianna Occhipinti's, too often the wines just seem heavy and thick. But here is another excellent version from Feudo Montoni, which practices organic viticulture at its vineyards in central Sicily and ferments the grapes in concrete. The result is a spicy, herbal, lightly tannic wine that might be nice with eggplant Parmesan. (Wilson Daniels, Napa, Calif.)
